

London, Stockholm: 22 May 2018
For Immediate release

Stockholm Business School joins the world's elite MBA providers with AMBA accreditation

Stockholm
Business School

Stockholm Business School (SBS) has officially received accreditation from The Association of MBAs \(AMBA\), one of the leading authorities on postgraduate business education.

AMBA accreditation represents the highest standard of achievement in postgraduate business education and is earned only by the best post graduate management programmes. AMBA accredits the Master of Business Administration (MBA), Master of Business Management (MBM), and Doctor of Business Administration (DBA) courses in only the top 2% of the world's Business Schools.

AMBA's rigorous assessment criteria ensures that only the highest-calibre of programmes which demonstrate the highest standards in teaching, curricula, and student interaction achieve AMBA accreditation. AMBA accreditation is international in scope and reach, and AMBA works with senior academics at top educational institutions around the world to continuously update accreditation criteria to maintain one unique, in-depth, and detailed approach. AMBA believes accredited programmes should be of the highest standard and reflect changing trends and innovation in postgraduate management education. As such, the accreditation process reflects this commitment to fostering innovation and challenges Business Schools to continuously perform at the highest level.

Upon receiving AMBA accreditation, all current MBA students and MBA alumni of Stockholm Business School are invited to join AMBA's global member community of more than 33,000 students and alumni in more than 70 countries, for networking, thought leadership, career development, and a variety of perks and benefits.

SBS is the second Business School in Sweden, and the first in Stockholm, to gain accreditation for their EMBA programme.

Ian Richardson, PhD, Stockholm Business School's Director of Executive Education commented: 'We're extremely pleased to receive AMBA accreditation for our Executive MBA. The decision of the international panel reflects the enormous amount of work that has gone into creating an executive programme of the very highest quality. For that, we must thank faculty, administrators, partners and the participants themselves. AMBA accreditation is important for the programme and the School, but most importantly, for the experienced and talented people who choose to do their MBA with us. We look forward to building on this success.'

Tel: +44 (0)207 246 2686 www.mbaworld.com
25 Hosier Lane, London, EC1A 9LQ, UK.

Katherine O'Flynn, Director of Accreditation at AMBA said: 'AMBA is very proud to welcome Stockholm Business School into the AMBA family. We are very particular about who we accredit. In fact, AMBA accredits less than 2% of the world entire portfolio of Business Schools. Operating as both an accreditation and membership organisation, AMBA is unique in the postgraduate management field, as we bring together the business leaders of tomorrow with the thought leaders of today.'

Andrew Main Wilson, Chief Executive of AMBA, added: 'I'm delighted to welcome Stockholm Business School into the strong global family of AMBA accredited Business Schools.'

'With its accreditation Stockholm Business School joins the world's leading Business Schools. We value working closely with them and AMBA's MBA members to ensure outstanding postgraduate management education continues to be the top priority for employers, governments, and ambitious executives who will become the global business leaders of the future.'

ENDS

Notes to Editors

About Stockholm Business School

Stockholm Business School was founded at the end of the 1950s and initially operated on a small scale as part of the Stockholm School of Economics. It became an independent department of Stockholm University in July 1962. By the end of the 1960s, the School had grown significantly in size and is now one of the largest departments at the University with around 3,500 students including 30 doctoral students, approximately 70 lecturers / research staff and about 30 administrative staff. Stockholm Business School is part of the Faculty of Social Sciences at Stockholm University.

About AMBA

The Association of MBAs is the impartial authority on postgraduate management education and is committed to raising its profile and quality standards internationally for the benefit of Business Schools, students, alumni, and employers.

AMBA established that vision in 1967 and it's as relevant today as it was more than 50 years ago:

- Our accreditation service is the global standard for all MBA, DBA, and Master's degrees, currently accrediting programmes from the top 2% of Business Schools in more than 70 countries.
- We are the only professional membership association that connects MBA students and graduates, accredited Business Schools, and MBA employers throughout the world.
- Through our proprietary research centre we produce a rich body of reports exploring global trends in the sector and drivers of thought leadership.
- Networking opportunities online and in person are offered across all continents with corporate partners, alongside access to a database of career advice and knowledge and an MBA jobs portal.
- Accredited Business Schools, and their students and alumni are provided with access to a range of exclusive services and benefits, including superior world-class events and training.
- All of our diverse stakeholder groups are integrated through contributions to our online community.

For more information or interviews, please contact:

David Woods-Hale, Head of Communications, AMBA - d.woods@mbaworld.com

Clementine Boyer Duroselle, PR and Public Affairs Executive, AMBA – c.boyer@mbaworld.com

Tel: +44 (0)207 246 2686 www.mbaworld.com

25 Hosier Lane, London, EC1A 9LQ, UK.